Mythical Pioneer

Once upon a time, there was a young and ambitious dreamer known as Icarus. Having an inquisitive mind, he was intrigued with the facility of birds to travel through space, seemingly without effort. Since his own movements involved the expenditure of energy and were slow in comparison, he cogitated long on the advantages of flying and having deduced that all that was needed was a pair of wings, he fabricated two by molding them from wax. By adjusting these properly over his shoulders, he succeeded, by some miraculous effort, in lifting his body into the air, only to find that wax would not stand the heat of the sun in the higher altitudes. The story goes on to tell that his folly sent him to his death on a tiny, stony island of the blue Aegean. Today that island is known as Icaria, named for this mythical pioneer in aviation.

Garden Treat

While carrots are definitely a health food, ranking second only to the tomato in the quantity of vitamins they are likely to contribute to the family diet, when served young and garden fresh, they are one of the garden's most delightful treats. Thinning out can be left until the young roots are finger size, and these are so sweet and tender, they seem like another vegetable. Travelers who visited Paris before the war tell of such carrots, as one of their cherished memories. Sow the seed thinly, three or four to the inch, in a shallow drill. Because they germinate slowly, mix in a few pinches of radish seed, because the radishes will come quickly and mark the row, so you may safely disturbing it in cultivation. Be sure to harvest the radishes promptly, so they will not crowd the carrots which succeed them.

Tend Slip Covers To Assure Long Wear

Hang slip covers up to air occasionally — outdoors on a slightly windy day, if possible. Because some dirt sifts through, brush upholstery on both sides while the covers are off. Brush or vacuum covers weekly.

Washing is better than dry cleaning for preshrunk, colorfast materials. To test colorfastness, sew a sample (which includes all the fabric colors, and some of the trimming) to a piece of white material. Wash thoroughly, using the same method as for slip cover itself, and press. Then rip from white material and see whether any of the colors have "bled." The once-common custom of soaking fabric in vinegar or salt solution to set colors is useless.

When only the arms or back of slip cover are soiled, they may be cleaned separately. Place slip cover wrong side out on an old soft bath towel, folded two or three times. Rub spots with dry-cleaning fluid. Work from seam line to seam line to avoid leaving rings.

Signal Corps

Since its authorization as a separate branch of the army on March 3, 1863, the signal corps has grown from a $2,000 item in the army budget to a multi-billion dollar undertaking. Its infant organization during the early days of the civil war was composed of less than a hundred officers and enlisted men, while today it numbers more than twice the size of the peacetime regular army. It is serving every commander and every soldier on every front and is linking them together in united action through every means of military communication. Several years before a separate signal corps was established in 1863, congress authorized the appointment of "one signal officer" in the army and appropriated $2,000 "for the manufacture or purchase of apparatus for field signaling." A short time afterward a war department order carried the following assignment: "Assistant Surgeon Albert J. Myer to be signal officer with the rank of major, June 27, 1860, to fill an original vacancy."

Cod Is Honored By Portuguese

Not Just an Ordinary Food For People, but Highly Esteemed Institution.

WASHINGTON.—The cod that is so common and cheap in America is so esteemed in Portugal that the peasants commonly refer to it as "the faithful friend." They eat it only dry and hard since Portugal has no cold storage refrigerators in which to preserve or ship it.

Before the war Portugal had the lowest per capita consumption of meat in all Europe. In some of the inland provinces where meat is especially scarce, peasants eat it only once or twice a year on festive occasions.

This accounts for the "Kingdom of Bacalhau" in Portugal and its importance in the national economy and in politics.

The first historical contact of the Portuguese with the British stems from the scaly cod back in the 12th century. Portuguese fishermen who sailed to the North sea for their catches began to trade their wines from Oporto for the fish the Britons caught.

This helped make port wine a British institution, the codfish a Portuguese staff of life and the two countries the oldest allies in history, says the Chicago Tribune.

Gets Into Politics.

Portuguese politicians have made frequent use of the cod as a red herring and more than one revolution has succeeded on the promise of its leaders that the cost of cod would be lowered. Republican propagandists in the revolution of 1910 overthrew the 800-year-old monarchist regime by promising for the welfare of the people to "establish means of getting the country fully supplied with cod at very small cost."

Down through the years it was a key government problem to make available enough bacalhau to satisfy the public demand. Trade treaties with countries that supplied Portugal with bacalhau were always favored in diplomatic dealings.

With the outbreak of World War II, the problem of getting enough bacalhau for Portugal became acute and the Salazar government concentrated on building up a codfishing fleet. Since the war, scores of fishing schooners have been built, yet Portugal still is getting only about a fifth of the amount it requires.

The government has begun a far-reaching plan of education, promotion and betterment of the rights of fishermen, in addition to a stepping up of shipbuilding. Schools for the sons of fishermen have been opened and are operated under supervision of the codfishing official trade committee.

Big Annual Event.

For centuries cod fishing has been one of the hardest and most dangerous of sea jobs. The fleet goes to far Arctic banks and the fishermen, born to and raised in sunny Portugal, face a brutal, alien climate. The government has taken steps to provide schooner crews with modern equipment, raised their salaries and insured them against the hazards of the trade.

One of Lisbon's biggest events every year is the departure of the codfishing fleet. The president of the republic, the clergy and public officials take part in the farewell festivities.

The crews are blessed by the cardinal patriarch of Lisbon and the men parade down the historic Plaza do Imperio after attending mass at the famed Jeronimos monastery which was built to celebrate the voyage to India by Vasco da Gama.

The fleet is accompanied to the Newfoundland banks by a mothership of the Portuguese armada, which acts as a post office and hospital ship for injured or ailing.

The government provides special radio broadcasts for the fleet all the time it is on the high seas and special messages from wives and children are read to fishermen over the central Lisbon transmitter.

Indian Problem Bobs Up Again

Shortage of Land; Changes Wrought by War Among New Questions.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—The Indian problem is bobbing up on the United States again.

The problem, in its essentials, shapes up along three lines:

1. The Indians are increasing in number, and the reservations are not increasing in size. Result, a shortage of land.

2. The war has brought new skills, new arts to the Indians without substantial prospect of opportunity for using them when peace comes.

3. The war has given many tribesmen a taste for a higher standard of living. Not willingly will they turn from war jobs and uniforms to the average Indian family's income of less than $500 a year.

A broad program to put the Indian on his economic feet is in the making. It is the aim of John Collier, United States Indian commissioner, according to the Associated Press, to increase returns from agriculture, stock raising and native arts, to develop natural resources on Indian lands.

These admittedly, are temporary expedients. There is no substitute, says Collier, for a long range effort to get and hold adequate land to support the nation's 365,000 Indians.

Looks to Tourists.

To take care of Indians returning from war jobs and the armed services, the Indian bureau has asked congress for funds to meet minimum educational, medical and conservation needs which the Indian service says "will employ all fit labor for 10 years."

That's where the new occupation has a large role in Collier's plans there; he sees the Indians as hosts at tourist lodges, as guides to the scenic and hunting hinterlands, and expects this will add $100,000 a year to Indian income in Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado and Utah where more than a fourth of the nation's Indians live. Sales by Indian craftsmen should bring in other thousands.

Collier hopes the Indians themselves will lead in providing tourist facilities, but he is preparing to institute a program if they don't.

Collier says the future also holds these possibilities:

Expansion of the Indian textile industry to take advantage of the Indian's natural talent for design. Such weaving is now confined largely to rug making by the Navajos and the manufacture of ceremonial garments by the Pueblo Indians.

Combination of the silversmith's art with huge deposits of the metal uncovered on the Navajo reservation.

More Land Needed.

A tribal furniture factory to utilize Indian woodworking ability and their stands of virgin timber.

Places for Hopi and other Pueblo Indians in the professions.

Collier says that tests show that Indians often excel whites in aptitude for professional training.

Collier feels that agricultural and livestock improvements, together with development of off-the-land occupations, might take care of the Indians' needs outside of the land problem.

"But in Montana," Collier says, "there are thousands of homeless, wandering Indians. Similar homeless Indians in Nevada have been partially provided for, but others remain without land."

Collier insists that the most feasible solution is more land, a solution which long has met powerful opposition.

Better use of the land offers hope for some groups. In southwestern Arizona are 80,000 acres set aside for the Colorado River Indians, a small tribe. All the basic reclamation work has been done and Collier hopes to arrange to settle other crowded Southwestern Indians there through an exchange of agreements with the Colorado tribe.

Germans Anger a Yank, So He Wins Top Medal

WITH THE U. S. FIFTH ARMY, ITALY. — The Germans made a slight mistake in getting Lieut. Orville E. Block "filed up" by potshotting at his company, because the little platoon leader wiped out a mountain-top full of the enemy practically by himself.

When the battle was ended, he personally had knocked out five machine gun nests, killed possibly a half-dozen Germans, captured nineteen, and wounded six more at Poggia village.

As a result, the congressional medal of honor was pinned on Block by Lieutenant General Truscott, commander of the United States Fifth army.

Keeping Up With Reds Too Much for Sergeant

McCOOK, NEB. — Sgt. Cecil R. Hillstone, operator of a mimeograph machine at the army air base here, has entered his claim as a casualty of the "Russian Front" even though he "never left home."

Turning out bulletins on the progress of the Russian campaign, he thrust a finger between the whirling drum and stand of the machine. The sergeant said he wasn't expecting the Purple Heart.

ENGAGEMENT OF
MISS MARY JANE HARVEY

Mr. and Mrs. Larkin Harvey, of Evergreen announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Jane to Calvin Twyman Phelps, of Lynchburg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Phelps, of Oakville. No date has been set for the wedding.

The wedding of Miss Aleise Burge to Mr. Arliss Maxwell was solemnized in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Harwood Saturday at eight o'clock P. M. The bride's pastor, the Rev. H. Frederick Jones was the officiating minister. The house was decorated with varicolored summer flowers the mantel in the living room being banked with mountain ivy, providing an improvised altar which were lighted candelabra. The bride was dressed in a sky blue suit with white accessories and carried a showee bouquet. Her maid of honor was her cousin, Miss Josephine Moore, who wore a rose sheer and a black picture hat. Mr. Maxwell's best man was Mr. A. R. Harwood. Bill Caldwell carried the ring. Miss Nancy Scott played the wedding march. In the dining room Mrs. John Curtis Caldwell, Mrs. G. Andrews, Mrs. E. D. Tegethoff and Miss Alice Harwood assisted Mrs. A. R. Harwood in receiving the guests. After the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell left for Norfolk, Va. Upon their return the couple will reside here, where he is employed.

American Food Plants Adopted in Old World

In the course of the four centuries and a half which have elapsed since the discovery of America almost all of American plant foods have attained world-wide distribution and in many places have become so common that their original American derivation has been forgotten. In parts of Europe, maize or Indian corn is thus popularly attributed to Turkey and called Turkish corn, just as in the United States the Chilean potato is called Irish, or, in eastern South America, English.

Aside from a few small fruits such as the wild strawberry, small blueberries and the like, which in their wild state have a circumpolar distribution, the food plants native to the western hemisphere are quite distinct from those of the several continents of the old world.

The European settlers both in North and South America quickly learned to use many of the vegetable foods of the Indians, including corn and beans that were commonly grown together, also pumpkin and squash, and, in South America and the West Indies, cassava. Some American food plants, such as the potato, failed to come into general use among the new popuation in the continent of their origin until after they had been carried to Europe and developed in cultivation.
